Dear Kelly,

Good news for families participating in the Transitional Aid to Families with Dependent Children (TAFDC) program! For the month of September, the Department of Transitional Assistance (DTA) will once again increase the income eligibility limits and payment standards for the TAFDC program. This increase in the payment standard is known as the clothing allowance benefit, and occurs only in September. Families participating in the TAFDC program will receive up to an additional $150/eligible child.

Please see below for more details on the clothing allowance benefit.

Who Is Eligible to Receive the Clothing Allowance?

Families can receive a clothing allowance of up to $150 for each child currently receiving TAFDC benefits or eligible to receive benefits.

Ineligible children include children who are:

- Age 19 and older;

- Subject to the family cap rule;
- Receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI); and/or
- Are undocumented immigrants.

TAFDC Income Eligibility Limit Increase: Benefits Extended to Some Working Families Not Receiving TAFDC

The TAFDC income eligibility limits will increase for September; the amount of the increase depends on the number of applicants or recipients under age 19 in the household. (The eligibility standard will be increased by $277.50 for each eligible applicant or recipient under age 19.)

This means that many low-income working families that normally are income-ineligible for TAFDC benefits will become eligible for the clothing allowance. Although these families will not receive cash benefits, they may be able to receive one year of MassHealth benefits and subsidized child care, in addition to the clothing allowance.

Clothing Allowance Benefit Amount

Families will receive $150/child if they are participating in the TAFDC program as of September 1st or if they apply by September 1st and are approved later; families that receive TAFDC for only part of September will receive a prorated clothing allowance.

Please note: The clothing allowance benefit is considered income under Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP, a.k.a. Food Stamp) rules. As with other increases in income, the receipt of the clothing allowance can lead to a temporary decrease in SNAP benefits for some families.
